

ABBEVILLE IN 1859.

Some Names that Were Unintentionally Omitted in First Publication.

A number of friends have complied with our request for additional names of citizens at that time, 1859.

Allen, Edward, took an overdose of morphine as he was going on an excursion with a large party. Efforts to save him were unavailing. He died at Southern depot.

Allen, J. Warren, went to war, died, Sept. 28, 1865, in Spartanburg.

Archer, R. A., physician, advanced in years.

Bergin, Jo.

Bowie, Alex., good soldier; after the war became manager of a shoe house in Baltimore. Manager of the house became ill, during which illness suggested that Mr. Bowie marry his widow and continue to manage the business. The marriage took place. Mr. Bowie gave best evidence of fidelity to his wife, and proved himself higher than to interfere with his widow's happiness.

Bowie, James A.

Branch, W. T., was a boy when the war broke out. After the war was insurance agent until a few years ago, when he died.

Buchanan, W. R., furniture dealer.

Calhoun, Norwood.

Calhoun, Wm. Patrick.

Christian, Thos. M., carriage maker.

Cobb, Thomas.

Cochran, Thomas R., ex-sheriff, built the Hemphill home in Fort Pickens.

Cunningham, Joel, merchant.

Davis, Ben, good fiddler, went to the war. Dead.

Davis, Lewis.

Davis, Thad., moved West, dead.

DeBruhl, Stephen, lawyer, partner of Marshall & Lee.

DeBruhl, Marshall P., attorney at law.

Dendy, Charles N., went to the war, came back, and because of some eccentricity left Abbeville, and was not heard from for thirty-eight years. His mother died without hearing from him. An estate in which he was a legatee was settled in his absence. Several years ago he made application for proof that he was a Confederate soldier. He is now in the Confederate home in New Orleans.

Douglass, John, went to the war, came home, owned the place now owned by W. A. Stevenson, moved to Florida, where he died.

Edwards, A. W., left Dec. '59 to go to Georgia, clerked for J. A. Allen.

Edwards, E., went to the war, merchant, dead; widow married Mr. White, Lowndesville.

Fair, Livy, went to the war, returned home. Dead.

Fowler, Larry, went to war, dead.

Golden, Reuben, went to the war, promising on the steps of the train as he left, that he would be back if any of the boys got back. Came home after the war. Dead.

Golden, Wm.

Gray, John, merchant, partner of Gray & Robinson, came from the "land of cakes and brither Scots," and was sometimes moved to jolly customers. On one occasion he put something in his advertisement like this: "Turn your footsteps to our store through your fields of snowy cotton. Through the swamps and through the bottoms. Till you reach our well-filled store. Bring your potent and your mighty dollars—Bring your money! money!! money!!! Wherever you receive respect and veneration."

Hamilton, John A., brick maker, had two grown sons who went to the war; Gilbert died recently in Abbeville; George lives in Augusta.

Hamlin, LaFayette, went to the war, dead.

Hill, John L., went to war, living at Abbeville.

Hughes, J. M., was among the first to go to the war. Was wounded at Gaines Mill, where so many of our men were killed. Later he received another bullet wound. Since the war, he, like the rest of us, has received many heart wounds.

Livingston, J. F., junior, went to war in Capt. Moses Owen's Company. Afterward County Officer.

Livingston, William, lawyer, went to the army. Captain in Orr's Regiment. Died at Seneca.

Lyon, John T., died since the war.

McBride, John, became president of South Carolina College. Afterward moved to Virginia where he gained distinction as an educator.

McCaw, John, killed in the war.

McCaw, W. H., native, moved to Columbia after the war and published a straight-out Democratic newspaper in Radical times. Burnt to death in kerosene lamp explosion.

McClarin, John, postmaster.

McDonald, John, wounded at Murfreesboro, died in hospital.

Magill, Wm.

Magill, Dan.

Magill, Sam.

Marshall, Ssm, physician.

Marshall, William, went to the war, moved to Florida, dead.

Martin, Robert R., tailor.

Miller, G. McD., clerk, merchant, went to war with Minute Men, came home, organized Company G, Orr's Rifles of which he was Captain, promoted to Colonel. After the war was member of the mercantile firm of Miller & Robertson.

Miller, Geo., removed to Anderson. Dead.

Miller, William, went to war, brother-in-law of J. S. Stark.

Mooney, Wm., mechanic, Irishman.

Moore, Henry, became Methodist preacher.

Moore, Ed., went to war, living in Texas.

Moore, W. C., merchant. Dead.

Noland, J. C., harness maker.

Norrell, Stephen, harness maker.

O'Keefe, —, shoemaker.

Parker, Edwin, physician.

Parker, W. H., lawyer, good citizen, legislator who, with his associates in the General Assembly, did more for the development of manufacturing interests in South Carolina than any equal number of associates ever did for any State. He and his associates brought this State to second in the United States in the cotton mill business.

Perlin, Joel S., lawyer, died 1876, of heart trouble; fell from trolley into Tug-aloo River; taken out dead.

Perrin, L. W., lawyer, Master in Equity when he died of heart trouble, September 1907, while attending base ball game.

Perrin, T. C., Jr., killed in war.

Quaife, merchant, partner of W. C. Moore, came from a Northern State. In bad health. Dead.

Roche, Morris, moved to Florida.

Russell, Buchanan, one of the best mechanics ever in town.

Shillito, Harper.

Shillito, Wm.

Taggart, John, jailer.

Taggart, Patrick, in war, lives in Norfolk.

Turner, Stringfellow, son of Dr. Turner. Dead.

Wardlaw, Alfred, commission merchant in Charleston, 1859.

Wardlaw, Alfred, died of wounds.

Wardlaw, Arthur, son of Alfred Wardlaw, killed in battle.

Winstock, B. M. & S. A., merchants, did business at the stand where the Farmers Bank is now located. It is said that S. A. Winstock said that this was a strange community; so many people spoke to him after this fashion, when the year was about to close: "Sam, have you made out your account? Please make it out at once. I want to give you my note. I never like to owe a man a damn cent after Christmas."

Williams, David.

Wilson, Edjal.

Wilson, John, Confederate soldier, came home, now in Soldiers' Home.

EVANS-FERRELL.

The marriage of Miss Lucy Robinson Evans to Mr. Julius Leon Ferrell of Greeleyville, was solemnized Wednesday at high noon at the Lebanon Presbyterian church, Rev. J. B. Hillhouse officiating. Many friends and relatives of the young couple gathered at the church for the ceremony, which was a simple and beautiful one. The bride was attended by her bridesmaids, Misses Margaret Evans, of Clinton, Miss Margaret Evans, of Clinton, Miss Evans, Miss Annie Covington, of Greeleyville with Miss Benie Watson, of Abbeville, Miss Athel Ferrell, of Greeleyville with Miss Maggie Johnson, of Chester. The bridesmaids were attractive in lingerie dresses of white elaborate with lace and hand-work, they wore bouquets of hats and carried large pink tulips. Their carnations tied with pink tulle. The bride wore a beautiful toilet of pink champagne, carried a large picture hat of pink meline, pink gloves and an armful of pink carnations completed this costume. Four dainty little flower girls, each carrying a basket of rose petals, entered next and scattered the bride's pathway with rose leaves. Misses Annie Dean West, of Bolton, Lucia Gillebeau, Marie and Katherine Guert, of Abbeville, and Katherine Guert, of Abbeville, entered with the bride. Mr. John G. Evans, and was met at the altar by the groom, who came in with Mr. Vincent Taylor.

The bride was never more attractive than in her bridal array. Her gown of champagne exquisitely fashioned with side bertha of rose lace fitted her graceful figure perfectly. Sprays of lilies of the valley brought from the shoulder to the waist, made a pretty finish to this charming costume. The veil was caught with a spray of lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was an exquisite cameo, an heirloom of the groom's family. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley arranged in shower effect.

A reception was tendered the bride and groom at the bride's home in Abbeville. Here the guests were met in the hall by Mrs. H. W. Pratt and Miss Maggie Lettmer, after being served with refreshing punch by Mrs. W. R. Hargis at a prettily appointed table in the back hall, were ushered into the front parlor. Ivy garlands, pot plants and cut flowers were arranged to make a bower about which the bride and groom were grouped to receive. In the dining room Miss Sara White, Miss Louise Watson and Miss Eva Crews, of Spartanburg, received. The table in the center was covered with a large lace piece a slender cut glass vase filled with pink and white carnations formed the floral centerpiece. Blooming hydrangeas were placed effectively about the room. The bride's cake was of an artistic conception in its snowy adornment. Miss Covington cut the dime. Mr. John Evans the ring and Mr. Grier Sherard the thimble. A solid course with lemon ice was served by Misses Annie Reid Evans, Nellie Hardin, Louise Gilbert and Margie Gillebeau.

In the hall up-stairs were displayed the attractive and useful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Ferrell left at four o'clock for Asheville, N. C., where they will spend a few days before going to their home in Greeleyville. The bride travelled in a smart suit of tan serge cut with cream lace with hat and gloves to match.

Snowdrift

Overcomes Every "Fried Food" Objection

There used to be two objections to fried foods—they were not nearly as digestible as foods prepared in other ways. Now, however, as most good cooks know, this has been overcome by frying in Snowdrift. There is no more healthful way to fry foods than in Snowdrift. It stands a very high temperature without burning; with the Snowdrift very hot in the beginning, the surface of the food is immediately cooked. This prevents the fat from getting in and the food juices from getting out.

The other objection to fried foods was their expense—frying required so much lard or butter, it was by far the most expensive method of cooking. Snowdrift has also overcome this. In frying you can use Snowdrift over and over again, frying different articles in the same Snowdrift. Fry fish today, strain the Snowdrift and fry chicken tomorrow in the same Snowdrift. The chicken will not taste of fish. Frying with Snowdrift is a decided economy. Try it!

Snowdrift is sold only by the can—never sold from barrels and tubs.
